I am pleased you have selected me as your counselor. This document is designed to provide you with information you need regarding my background and to ensure that you understand our professional relationship. We will discuss any questions about this information or other preliminary matters at the beginning of our work together today.

I am a "Licensed Professional Counselor" in North Carolina. I hold a Masters of Arts degree in Counseling from Colorado Christian University, which was completed in May 1995. I have been in practice as a counselor since January 1997. I joined The Barnabas Center on March 1, 2000.

Counseling Services Offered/ Theoretical Approaches

It is important that you understand from the outset of our counseling relationship that the intent of our work together is to enable deeper and more loving relationships with God and others. Over the years I have come to see that many of the non-medical problems we encounter grow out of difficulties in relationships. I believe that relationships provide the context in which people can see that their struggles with others and within themselves are foundational struggles with God. My purpose as a counselor is to help people find ways to move toward richer, fuller, more loving relationships with others and God - through greater dependency on Christ.

You can expect to work inside and outside of the counseling room. On occasion, I may request that you read books or interact with some assignment. Change is seldom quick and easy; therefore your consistent and ongoing effort will be very necessary.

The theoretical base for my work with you as a client will come from the concepts and ideas set forth by a variety of authors and teachers in the Christian counseling field, most notable are Drs. Larry Crabb and Dan Allender. This spiritual framework is integrated with perspectives of family systems, existential, psychodynamic and cognitive-behavioral understandings of how people work. My approach focuses on looking at patterns of relating to others as a way of understanding how you think, believe and behave towards life. Because we look at patterns, we will be looking at your whole life, not just the part of your life dealing with an immediate problem. We will talk about the pain that you are experiencing and we will talk about the strategies you are employing to deal with that pain. Some of the issues we deal with may evoke some uncomfortable feelings like sadness, guilt, anxiety, anger or frustration. In addition, some of our work may lead to what seems to be worsening circumstances or even losses (for example, the result of counseling cannot promise that a marriage will stay together). Despite these risks, our goal will always be to examine the struggles in light of Christ's love and sacrifice for us.

I believe that talking through both the pain and the strategies you use to handle the pain will enable you to accept what you cannot change and find constructive ways, which are in your control, to work with present problems. Implicit in this process are the Biblical concepts of forgiveness, reconciliation, and character development. Fundamentally the context of God's grace and His forgiveness enables positive change and growth to occur.

My clients are adult individuals, couples, and families. At times my work includes adolescents ages 15 and up. Most of the clients I work with seek counseling due to a variety of relational and personal issues, such as anxiety, depression, and interpersonal conflict. I provide both individual and marriage counseling.

I am not equipped to work individually with severe medical or psychological issues, and therefore will make appropriate medical or psychiatric referrals, as I deem necessary.

Confidentiality

The information you share with me as your counselor, including the fact that you are a client, will not be discussed outside the practice without your knowledge or consent, nor will your records be sent to or shown to others without a signed release from you. As we work together, any exceptions to confidentiality will be identified as they arise. The legal standing of privileged communication is less clear in marital and family work where there are really multiple clients. There are, however, a few exceptions to your individual privilege of confidential communication:

a. Danger to yourself or others. If you threaten to harm either yourself or others, or to commit a felony, and if I believe you might do this, I am under obligation under the law to protect any involved people from physical harm.

b. Child abuse. If I have reason to believe that you are abusing or neglecting a child, I am obligated under North Carolina law to report that to the Department of Social Services. You should also be aware that "social service agencies" define a broad range of events as reportable under child protection status, including various types of hitting which could not be construed as acceptable discipline, whether or not bruises are made. Also, there are times in which child abuse which occurred quite some time ago may be legally required to be reported; usually when the victim of past abuse is still under the age of 18. Thus far, I have not seen Social Services take any action in such cases of past abuse.

c. Domestic abuse. If I have reason to believe that you are abusing or neglecting another dependent or elderly adult; or that you are being abused or neglected yourself, I am obligated under North Carolina law to report that to the Department of Social Services.

d. Supervision. In my counseling ministry I have a policy of supervision to help guarantee that you receive quality service. Consequently, your case may be discussed with my supervisor and other counselors as necessary. My supervision occasionally requires that I videotape or audiotape counseling sessions wherein my practice of therapy is reviewed. Videotape or audiotape of our sessions will always be at your written consent and
